

Exhibit #3: On information and belief, this trip to Las Vegas was, or included, an unreported gift from developer Steve Oedekerck.

Derek Reeve: San Juan Capistrano City Councilman District 3

Like This Page · July 30, 2017 ·

I recently returned from a trip to Las Vegas. We had a great time. The first degree burns on my right hand and arm have healed nicely. According to my CAT scan, my brain is, and I quote, "unremarkable." Lol Seriously, there are 35,000+ people in San Juan Capistrano that could have told me that! At least I have confirmation I actually have a brain. Oh, and I won $20 and saw far too many partially naked people on The Strip, which likely is what led to the need for the CAT scan in the first place. Those disturbing visions definitely don't stay in Vegas. 😊

Meanwhile I run into THIS guy in Vegas vacationing with his family. We had a great visit over radically bizarre yet ingenious desserts and coffee. Anyway I insisted we take a picture together to post on Facebook so we may launch "A Thousand Conspiracy Theories!" I'll start: Steve and Derek met across state lines to secretly negotiate behind closed doors in a smoked filled room, a deal granting Steve an art deco designed hotel in Los Rios Street, partially funded by SDG&E and of course "The Ranch", in exchange for Derek starring as a body double in Steve's next animated film.

Finally in regard to the half dozen emails I returned home to, most from nonresidents, who insist Patterson remain on the SONGS Community Engagement Panel, remember ... It has been confirmed I have a brain, and I know how to use it ... most of the time. Lol See you Tuesday!

👍 😊 🍷 58

11 Comments 1 Share

👍 Like 💬 Comment ➦ Share 👤

Most Relevant ▾